NEW HAVEN DIVORCE CASE IN LONDON. MARRYING FOR MONEY. - The London journals come to us, with the details of a divorce case which has been making some noise in the upper circles of society there. The history of the case runs through many ponderous columns of "legal intelligence," but the main facts are epitomized by the Times with sufficient clearness to enable us to comprehend its general bearings. Mrs. Marchmont was formerly a Mrs. Lockett. Mr. Lockett, a tavern keeper, in the course of nature died, leaving behind him this widow, who, as it appears, became entitled at his decease to the very comfortable sum of £50,000. This widow at the time Mr. Marchmont paid his addresses to her was 50 years of ago and partial to sherry. Mr. Marchmont was a widower, as the lady was a widow, but be had children by his former marriage; she had none. He was the minister of a Dissenting chapel at Islington, and according to his own account, what between the stipend of his office and his gains from literary sources, be made up an income of something like 1.000l a year. He appears to have considered that a union between himself and Mrs. Lockett would be an excellent arrangement, although the lady was fourteen years older than himself. He was successful in his suit; it was agreed between them that he was to give up his chapel--that he should be at the charge of his own personal expenses—that he should educate and clothe his children, and pay all costs of a carriage and pair of horses. Mrs. Marchmont's property, on the other hand, was to be entirely settled on herself, but she engaged on condition that her suitor would give up his chapel, that she would build for him a Protestant church, which she would attend with his family .-The document, dated July 10th 1857, in which Henry Marchmont devotes himself to eternal perdition if he should ever in any way attempt to meddle with his wife's fortune, is probably unprecedented as a sample of eager blasphemy. It is entirely discreditable to the man who could write it, as to the woman who could receive such a paper, and after-wards marry the author of it. Married they were, and they proceeded to Tonbridge for their honeymoon. But alas! No sooner was the Gordian knot tied than the disturbances began which have formed the subject of the

"What a fool I have been to marry. I hate married life!" was nearly the earliest expression used by this devoted wife to her affectionate husband. Mr. Marchmont, however, appears to have soon had good cause to repent the precipitancy with which he had risen to the golden fly; his married life was one scene of perpetual strife—not mere ordinary domestic strife-but of swearing, cursing, struggling, chasing his wife about, and of behavior so seandalous on both sides, that it is difficult to say whether husband or wife should be more loudly condemned. Mrs. that her husband had married her for her money alone; which was true enough. Money, however, she would not let him have; if his wife sent him to take a railway ticket for her recent suit. In the case of this miserable couple there was brief pause indeed between the marriage altar and the Divorce Court .-

he was obliged to bring back the change and was rated soundly and publicly if she judged the tale incorrect. Sometimes one, sometimes the other, would go out ostensibly with suicidal intentions. There was a row about made a noise while he was writing. There was a row about the wine. The wife in a maudlin, sherry sort of way, would take the servants-anybody, in fact, but her husband into her confidence. Then the lady would leave the house, and Mr. Marchmont would betake himself to our advertising office with affectionate entreaties to her to come back .-Here is a specimen of one of these precious

"Rosa dearest, with a broken heart your drooping flower entreats you to return --Come back, I beseech you, without one hour's delay. I shall not breathe your flight to a living being until I hear from you. Oh! Rose you are more fondly loved than ever by T-p. Forgive! Do not act rashly. We can be happy." Then the "drooping flower" wanted to be refreshed with a golden shower, and there was a fresh disturbance. In cabe, in the police stations, at the houses of relatives and friends, the same kind of scenes, interlarded with oaths and blasphemy, were of constant occurrence. The result was the trial of which we have recently been compelled to give a report in our columns. The jury have decided that this miserable couple are henceforth to live apart; perhaps it is better that they should; but they might have done this without the intervention of the law.

UNFORTUNATE.

men, while visiting a brother minister at Paterson, on Tuesday last, for the purpose of officiating in his pulpit on that evening, had his overcoat and shawl stolen from the hall of the residence of his fellow preacher, while the family were partaking of their evening meal. In the pocket of the coat were four sermons-one of which the gentleman designed delivering on that evening-but having lost them he was obliged to speak extemporaneously, and of course, under a disadvantage. It is hoped the thief will read the discourses, and so profit by them as to hereafter obtain his clothing in a more honest manner."
